This book was not supposed to have a theme. At the beginning of the year, the farthest thing from my mind was participating in the cliché of a themed yearbook. But things change, and when 9/11 happened, the theme for the year materialized out of the undefined substance of the time. As a nation, as a campus, and as a class, 2002 marked a transition period. We do not carry the idea through the book, instead choosing only to attempt to document photographically the dense character of our school and class (you will notice there is almost no wasted space; we could not avoid resembling the Colorado College way of life) . Nevertheless, we at The Nugget would like 2002 to be remembered as The Turning Point.

2002 was the year that so many Americans, especially of our generation, saw themselves in a new light. Initially, it was only that we joined that vast league of nations that have lost their respective innocence to acts of violence unrestrained by western political tradition. But then, a chain of events swept the nation that caused all of us to examine more closely our economic, diplomatic, and ethical policies. Some recognized 9/11 and its aftermath as the reaping of seed well-sown; others simply did not. And above all, The conundrum that was the War on Terrorism consumed the countries conscience; Some said it was a massacre without dignity, gross unilateralism without responsibility or humility. Others said it was necessary to maintain our sovereignty, security, and preserve our way of life. Either way, our self-definition was challenged and we entered a new chapter in our nation's history.

And under Kathryn Mohrman's administration, CC underwent broad-scale transformation. Architecturally, the new apartments altered the western face of the campus, according to one's view manifesting either irreverence for the hewn stone heritage of the school (not a new tradition in CC architecture) and the prevalent concern for sustainable architecture. New buildings were planned to cater to the growing student dedication to studio arts and environmental studies, both expanding the campus and compacting its center. Due to the president's extensive travel, which alternately endeared and estranged her to the students, faculty, and board of trustees, we gained a sister school and an exchange program at Fudan University in China. Our endowment grew to over 350 million dollars. The Catalyst published the notorious Niggalodeon satire in the spring, leading to a new circulation of dialogue between campus groups, CCA, and Cutler publications, and a renewed conversational focus (both local and national) on the school's commitment to diversity. 2002 also marked another beginning and ending; the end of the beloved Summer Start program and the beginning of the untested Winter-Start program. CC Fair Labor gained ground in the battle with the business office to force Marriott into conceding rights and living wages for its workers. And then, of course, Kathryn resigned, placing the school at the fork of a new road to be defined by the new president, former Ohio Governor Richard Celeste.

2002 is also the year that we as a class were released unto the world. It was a turning point in the young lives of all members of our graduating class- we had a range of aspirations, talents, and paths. and we were newly qualified to pursue them. The future was wide open.

Never let it be said that 2002 did not occur, and follow a most dynamic course. Here is proof.

Notes to the reader:

- #1. there is very little to actually read. This book is primarily a photographic document.
- #2. This means that some aspects and facets of CC life may have been overrepresented, as they presented really attractive photo ops.
- #3. Some facets of 2002 are placed next to each other, seemingly inappropriately. This may have been because we were being cheeky and (for example) putting the members of Student Government right next to thier apparently polar opposites, the african drummers, or it may have been because we ran out of room.
- #4. We regret that we were unable to cover certain student groups: notably, the greek system, student govern-ment, and religious life.

CC Peace Rally...

September 12, 2001

Dear Members of the Colorado College Community,

In September, we welcomed 500 fresh faces to our campus. These first-year students came full of hope, wonder and awe. Today, they're stunned. Some are angry. A month ago, they lined up for burgers at the all-campus picnic. Today, they line up to give blood. Most students starting classes this fall were born in 1983, a few years before the Challenger explosion. Too young to remember that national catastrophe -- much less the televised coverage of the Kennedy and King assassinations -- they gather in cafeterias, dorm rooms and classrooms with other students, asking why and what now and what can I do. They want to be involved, and to try to understand. And that, frankly, is why they were selected as our class of 2005.

Since the events of September 11, we have held special gatherings for the campus community to grieve and to discuss world events. We've increased counseling services and offered more opportunities for community service. We believe that going about the business of residential college education -- though far from "business as usual" -- is the best way to honor those who have been touched by this tragedy.

It's difficult to predict what will happen in the coming weeks and months. Discussion and discourse, though, is what we do. We have for 127 years, through the world wars, the Great Depression, the McCarthy era, Vietnam. That business will continue.

In times like this, a liberal arts education is more relevant than ever before. In our classrooms, we emphasize the importance of intercultural understanding, language study, economic and political thought, and international study. We're serious about our commitment to educate students for intellectual achievement, as well as for social responsibility.

We're a small family. Our students are not anonymous here, not lost in the back of a packed lecture hall. Because we embrace community involvement on this campus, students learn early the value of community participation later in life, be it with business associates, at a school, or with a neighborhood group.

And people lean on their communities in times like this. That sense of loyalty to community you've learned in and outside the classroom means you are ready to do, to say, to act ... now, when our community needs us the most. A liberal arts education has taught you how to cultivate ideas with reason and justification. How to serve. How to think. And that means how to live.

When we welcome parents and alumni to campus at Homecoming in a few weeks, we know it will be a very different event than ever before. Many alumni have told us that connections to CC and their classmates are more important than ever.

It is my hope that your experiences at CC have helped you in some way to deal with this tragedy. When the events of the last few days fill you with anger and rage, your broader understanding of events of past centuries reminds you to stop, to listen, to think. This leadership quality means others will come to you for advice and reasoning. Rise to that call. Rely on your ties to Colorado College.

Sincerely,

Kathryn Mohrman
President

9.11.01

This is not a matter of conservatism vs. liberalism. We sell ourselves short by turning it into a political battle...we do support the right and responsibility that the government has to defend and protect our country...It is easy for us to sit here in the comfort of our community, 4000 miles from ground zero and criticize. It is easy, but it is shortsighted.

-Cody Carter & Kate Kaufmann

We must not declare war. We must never invade Afghanistan. Not only would such justice proliferate this murdering as it orphaned and widowed the next generation of terrorists, it would prove that we are mere reactionaries who must resort to prideful brutality as a diversion from our trauma and confusion. The energy it takes for one finger to pull the trigger that puts a bullet in one Saudi's head would be better used if it turned off one of the millions of televisions now dripping with patriotic, condescending rhetoric.

"The Men's Cross Country team looked strong this year, finishing fifth in the West Region. The team ran well throughout the season, but what was more impressive was the way they came together as a team. This team worked harder and accomplished more than any other team I have been a member of here at CC. I was honored to be a part of it, and am excited to see where this team is headed in the future. So to the entire team, congratulations and thank you for an awesome season."

President Mohrman formally made the decision to leave CC this summer. She said that although her sabbatical in China gave her time to think about leaving, it did not directly contribute to her decision. "While I was in China I was teaching, and taking language lessons and Chinese painting lessons, but it wasn't as hectic of a pace as I have here. So I had a chance to read more, just kind of think and reflect and so forth — sabbaticals are designed to give people a chance to kind of renew themselves."

Also contributing to her decision to leave was Kathryn's father. He recently passed away, and President Mohrman took it as a wake-up call. "When your parents die, you kind of start to think, 'well, I'm not immortal either, and what do I really want to do with the rest of my time?' I'm sure a lot of students have had those same kinds of thoughts since September 11th."

The Turning Point : Changing Presidents.

On Monday, Richard Celeste takes the reins as Colorado College's 12th president. A former two-term Democratic governor of Ohio, and director of the U.S. Peace Corps, the 64-year-old Celeste served as U.S. ambassador to India during the Clinton administration. As only the second non-academic to head the elite, private college, Celeste replaces Kathryn Mohrman, who is leaving to accept a Fulbright fellowship in Hong Kong after nine years as president.

Indy: Why did you decide that you might want to come to CC?

Celeste: Well, I think there's several reasons. I think that an outstanding liberal-arts education is even more relevant in this 21st century than it has been in the past, because we are going to be confronted with such dramatic changes in the nature of work and the workplace, and the nature of the technology we deal with, and the nature of the world we live in. And so, a broad-based liberal arts education, I think, is vital. The second is, I discovered what I should have known about Colorado College that it's a wonderfully innovative place that really takes teaching and learning very seriously; it celebrates good teaching and celebrates learning.

But part of the challenge was, I think, also clear to me: That is, the story of Colorado College isn't very well known, certainly the further east you go. People who are in the know, know that it is an outstanding institution. But that message needs to be communicated much further.

Recruit outstanding students from a variety of backgrounds and create a climate here, and a community here, where they can learn.

Part of their learning is to understand the challenges of coping with diversity. Again, if you project it on the world we're living in today -- we watch India and Pakistan struggling with their differences; we watch the hotbeds of terrorism, and the anger and pain and frustration that are among the things that breed some of that terrorism -- then a college like Colorado College, that wants to prepare young people for positions of responsibility in that world, and with an ability to handle themselves in that world, needs to be able to wrestle with those issues on campus.

So I think there is work to be done. There's work to be done in recruiting minority students. There's work to be done in making sure that the way we engage with each other on campus is, what I would call, "de-respectful." By that, I mean we don't ignore differences. Rather, we really explore what it means to be a young African-American woman in the United States today, a young Hispanic man or woman who's here aspiring to a profession or a career. It's kind of celebration, and it should be kind of a celebration of the world in which we live, and I think it was precisely that spirit that was of sandbagged [by the article]. It wasn't funny.

Raegan Truax

H.I.V. (Helping Ignorance Vanish) is a community service group that encourages HIV/AIDS awareness and coordinates HIV-related activities and presentations on campus. □

La Esperanza collects travel-size toiletries and donates them to agencies such as the Red Cross Temporary Emergency Shelter, the Center for the Prevention of Domestic Violence and our own CC Community Kitchen. □ Several CC academic and administrative departments have collection baskets or items are brought to the Center and then delivered to agencies. □

Susan Haley

CC Community Kitchen serves a free lunch to the hungry and homeless community every Sunday at Shove Chapel. □ Volunteers help set up, prepare food, serve meals, visit with guests, and clean up from Noon to 4:30PM.

Emily Irwin

Liesl Peterson

Raptor's Resource spends Saturday afternoons at the Pueblo Raptor Center maintaining the bird habitats, helping with bird rehabilitation, and learning to educate others on the importance of birds of prey to our environment. □ Raptor's Resource meets the 1st three Sat. from Noon to 5PM. □

Sean Coffey

Breckenridge Adaptive Ski □ trains CC student volunteers to use adaptive ski equipment on ski slopes. □ Once students are certified, they become a ski buddy for a person with a disability. □

We apologize for not including shots of the Room 46 winter concert, Rainbow Jam, the Environmental House Organic Potluck, and Livesounds winter events. Sometimes chemicals spill in the darkroom, and posterity is compromised. And Editors get to feature a pet project more prominently than they should...

Since 1978, the Arts and Crafts department has hosted the Colorado College Arts and Crafts Sale. It draws artists and craftsmen from around the state to sell their wares for two days alongside students, faculty, and alumni. This is, in short, the CC students' opportunity to support your local artists as well as procure gifts for the holiday season that really cannot be found anywhere else. Contributors to the sale include Carson Beightol, Christine Dougherty, Andrew Henn, Teal Fitzpatrick, Katy Horton, Collin Hu, Jennifer, Nicole Pasini, Valerie Schuch, Erin Reilley, Giselle Strepo, Kami Kicordiron, John Schripsema, Daryll Stevens, Maren True, and John Wenk. The sale provides a large portion of the Arts & Crafts Department's funding. Clay, small scale metal, and fiber are considered to be crafts rather than fine art, and therefore not an academic subject, and therefore provides a minimal amount of funding for operating costs. Repairs, new equipment, and miscellaneous costs come directly from the sale proceeds....

CCCCA/Student Government

Many members of Shove Council attended this meeting of CCCA to propose the monumental constitutional amendment passed this year allowing campus religious groups to apply for CCCA funding for their campus events.

"The faculty reports an intelligent but not always an intellectual student body. Some arrive at CC confident of their intellectual prowess and accustomed to incorporating their growing intellectual strength into their adult personae. For many though, the habits of disciplined academic inquiry will be acquired in the classroom and are not yet built into the fabric of their personal lives."

The Crestone Stupa

Courtney Cusick

December 31, 1980 - January 19, 2002

On the drive back to school after winter break, Courtney was killed with her close friend Michael Berg. People who knew her say that Courtney was a strikingly introverted girl. They say that her curiosity and meticulous habits in her intellectual pursuits marked her as a lifelong hunter of knowledge. Before she died, she had gone in the direction of forensic anthropology; but one never knows what the future might have held.

Rest in peace.

President's Response to Catalyst April Fool's Issue

Sent: 4/4/2002 6:27 PM

Colorado College believes in freedom of speech and freedom of thought. We do not censor our student publications, just as we do not censor the ideas of our faculty, staff, trustees, or students. However, freedom of speech and freedom of thought are liberties that also carry responsibility for one's actions. And such liberties do have limits; they do not include the right to harass, injure, or silence others. While I believe that our student journalists had no intention of harming anyone, the fact is that the many readers of these articles were offended. I am deeply disappointed by this situation. It does not measure up to the highest standards of Colorado College. One of our four college priorities is a commitment to diversity, which means that we expect the members of our campus community to treat one another with tolerance and respect. Attempts at humor that come at the expense of others are simply not funny. Such feeble efforts at satire are hurtful and disappointing, not just to the groups that were targeted, but to all of us.

We are all members of the same community, whatever our roles and responsibilities. As we seek not only to honor the diversity of our community but also to expand that diversity, we challenge ourselves to greater tolerance of individual differences as we also embrace our common understanding of what it means to be human.

As members of an academic community, we will direct our efforts to combat hurtful words with positive speech and forward-looking conversation. We seek to educate ourselves about our responsibilities toward one another and our obligation to learn more about the different members of the Colorado College community. Among our commitments to that goal of greater understanding:

- CCCA and student organization leaders will have leadership workshops both this spring and next fall

- Additional support will go to the bilingual family newspaper published by the Office of Minority Student Life

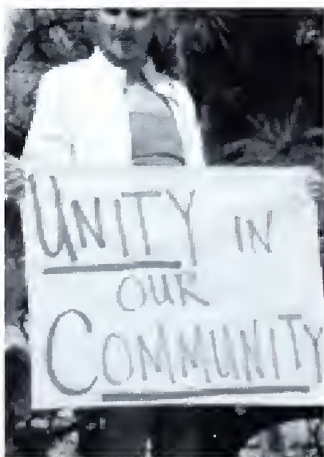

- We encourage students of color to participate more visibly in campus publications and student organizations

We will increase resources for the Diversity Council programming fund

- Senior staff will continue discussions of the opportunities and challenges of diversity at CC

Once again, I call upon all members of the Colorado College community to view this unfortunate incident as an opportunity for conversation about the true meaning of our commitment to diversity. Let us take this difficult moment to renew our commitments to one another.

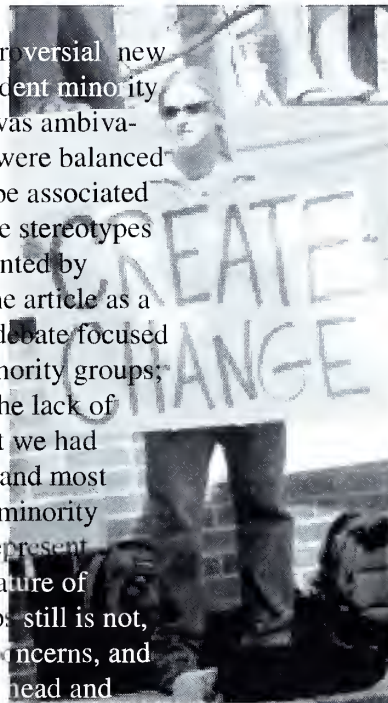

Sincerely, Kathryn Mohrman

d race relations

Editorial Note:

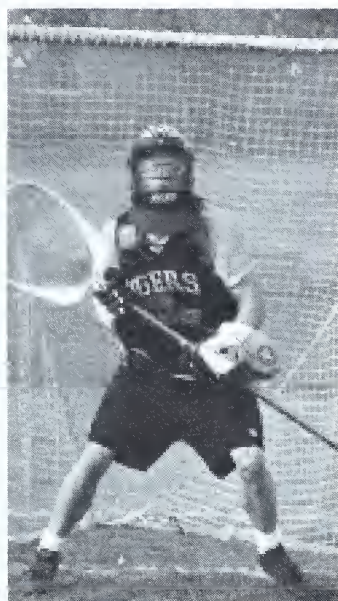

The April fool's issue of the Catalyst was a satire titled "Nickalodeon launches controversial new inter channel, Niggalodeon". On week after its distribution, a backlash from the student minority groups hit the campus, the administration, and Cutler publications. Student response was ambivalent: The overwhelming distress and anger aired at the Glass House press conference were balanced by student concerns for the sanctity of the forum of satire. Students were ashamed to be associated with or identified by the article, offended and hurt by it, or laughed at its attacks on the stereotypes placed on African Americans and white corporate culture. Neither response was presented by members of one ethnic group. And then the issues became larger, and students used the article as a touchstone to jumpstart dialogue about race in other areas of the school. Some of the debate focused on ownership of the word 'nigga'; some focused on the institutional racism felt by minority groups; some focused on how much sensitivity is too much, or not enough; some focused on the lack of synthesis between minority student groups and publications that they could claim that we had historically ignored them, and we could claim that we simply had no idea what they (and most other student groups) were doing. (editorial aside: Katherine Mormon's invitation to minority students to join publications was, inconveniently, misinterpreted as a plea that they represent themselves on the board to keep us from publishing our racist views. Somehow, the nature of student publications never really entered that part of the debate; it was not, and perhaps still is not, understood that they are a forum for every student to represent themselves and their concerns, and not a vessel for a group of professionals to represent the views of all of campus). The head and managing editors of the Catalyst, Audrey Thompson and John Traub, stepped down, and Giselle Prestepo and Karen Henderson (Vice president and president of Cutler publications) filled in for a month. State and National press got ahold of the issue, and without reading the article published responses and criticisms of the student body (most notably the Gazette columnist, Robert Schuch, who characterized students as white yuppies "Muffy and Biff" who would not be able to find jobs after college, yet would be well-versed in making fun of blacks). After the Black Student Union sent copies of the paper to the NAACP, there were rumors that they and Nickalodeon might sue the publications company. At the end of the ordeal, there were still literally no minorities on the Cutler Publications staff of board.

LINDSEY NICOLE WESTMILLER

Congratulations, Lindsay Westmiller! The self-discipline and hard work you've put forth makes you deserve the bright future before you. With great pride and love, Mom.

Dear Patrick,
 Congratulations to a magnificent son and "the best brother anyone could possibly hope for." You have courageously face dthe challenges life has thrown your way, and accomplished so very much. You are a fine scholar, and outstanding athlete, and a strong, confident, and caring friend. We are so very proud of you, and grateful to God for the blessing you have brought to our family. We wish you well on your life's journey, and no matter waht lies ahead, we will always be there to love and encourage you. We salute you, Patrick, on this your graduation day! May you go forth into the world to love, to laugh, to dream, to explore, and to serve.
 With much love,
 Mom, Dad, Kerry and little Annie

SAMIR INDAR SINGH

Samir: We commend and congratulate you on your graduation and for all your accomplishments at Colorado College. With our love, Mama, Papa and Namrita.

“Now I too am a “High Plains Drifter” searching the road for my destiny, intent upon living in a world where there is no looking back. I am carrying my one true dream inside.” - bell hooks.

Congratulations on your graduation from Colorado College, Daddy.
Maybe now you can get a good job and make those child support payments!

Love,
Mo Smith, Jr.

CARRIE BETH STALLER

Dear Carrie,

As you journey through life
Choose your destination well,
But do not hurry there,
Avoid the shortcuts,
Wander the backroads
Enjoy the scenery
And remember,
That the true worth of your travels
Lies not in the destination,
But in who you came to be along the way.

Congratulations,
Love,
Mom, Dad, Jennifer, and Brian

DEAN C. VETSIKAS

My Dear Nicole,

You are now armed with one of the greatest tools for living well, the knowledge and experience of how to learn. That, along with the confidence your achievement here at Colorado College, affords you great advantage in life.

I applaud your accomplishment. The hard work, the focused discipline of this academic milestone. Your next great adventure awaits and I watch in awe as your life unfolds. You are an incredibly delightful human being and it is the world's great fortune to have your valued participation.

Please remember that I am forever in your corner. My home is your home and can always be a refuge if needed. I am so proud of you and what you have accomplished here, and even more the passionate and intelligent woman that you are.

Use your knowledge, and the power of your intellect and heart well. They can do much good in a world that truly needs the gifts you have to offer.

With a tear of joy, and a hip-hip hooray,

I love you,

your button busting proud father

WORD.

To our dearest son, Jonathan, as you graduate~~

People are often unreasonable, illogical, and self-centered.

Forgive them anyway.

If you are kind, people may accuse you of selfish, ulterior motives.

Be kind anyway.

If you are successful, you will win
some false friends and some true enemies.

Succeed anyway.

If you are honest and frank,
people may cheat you.

Be honest and frank anyway.

What you spend years building,
someone could destroy overnight.

Build anyway.

If you find serenity and happiness,
they may be jealous.

Be happy anyway.

The good you do today,
people often will forget tomorrow.

Do goodness anyway.

Give the world the best you have,
and it may never be enough.

Give the world the best you've got anyway.

You see, in the final analysis,
it is between you and (you).

It was never between you and them anyway.

Any way. Anyway.

--author unknown

Be yourself.

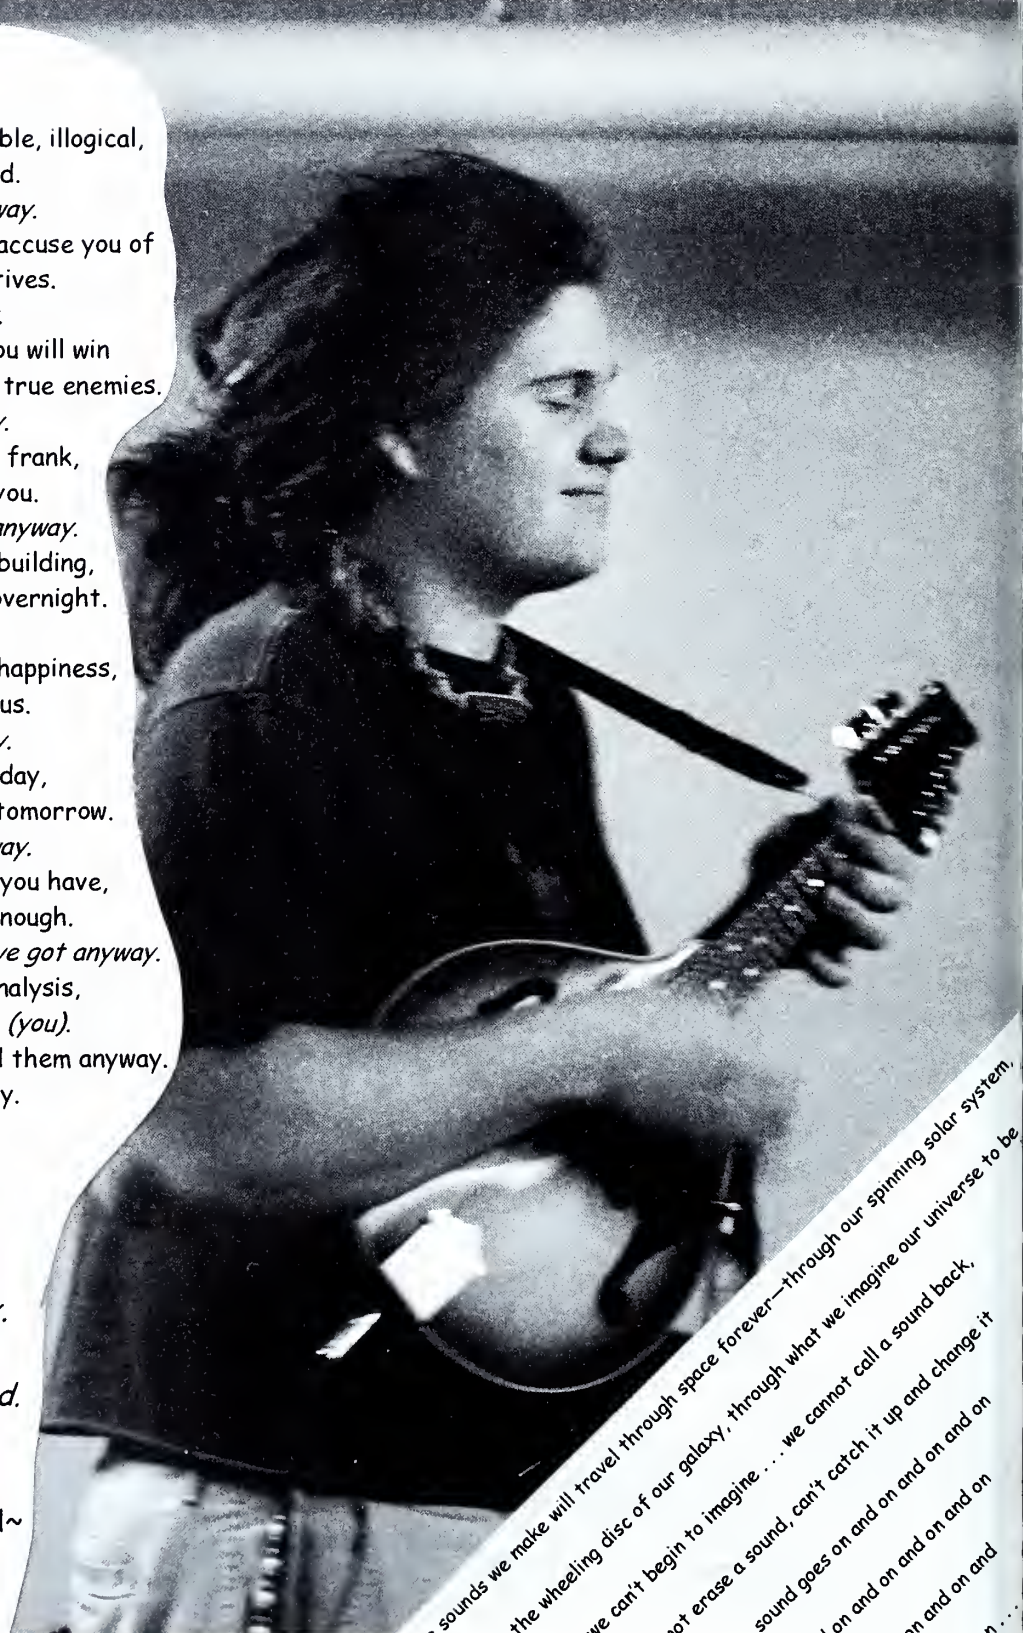

Do your work.

Have fun.

Save the world.

We love you.

~Mom and Dad~

... the sounds we make will travel through space forever—through our spinning solar system, through the wheeling disc of our galaxy, through what we imagine our universe to be we can't begin to imagine ... we cannot call a sound back, cannot erase a sound, can't catch it up and change it
... sound goes on and on and on and on and on and on and on and on and on
and on and on and on and on and on on and on ...
